GERMANY'S POLICY

GEN. GOERING GIVES FRANK INTERVIEW

ANSWERS FRENCH ALLEGATIONS.

COMMUNISM REGARDED AS STILL DANGEROUS

Berlin, To-day.

Seated in his study, which is decorated with an enormous Swastika on the wall the Prussian Premier, General Goering, clad in white flannels, and beaming with smiles, yesterday gave a long, exclusive interview to "Reuter" in which he frankly discussed domestic and foreign affairs.

He emphasised his liking for England and complained that he was always represented by England and English newspapers as a "bloodthirsty pig."

He asked the reason for this, pointing out that the British Government was also compelled to sign death warrants.

"If somebody kills a man, he must be killed, otherwise he does further damage," General Goering stated.

Since the death penalty had been reinforced in Germany, the percentages of murders and other crimes had dropped tremendously.

Referring to aviation, General Goering said:

"I have no military machines, but I don't disguise the fact that I always demand them, and Germany's air defence will always be brought up for discussion."

Referring to the allegations of secret German re-armament General Goering said: "Do you think I could build an Air Force as big as France's 3,000 machines without anybody noticing it?"

"Why all this fuss? All the world knows that the French do not want to disarm, but if they want war, I cannot alter that."

"The entire German nation will rise as one man to protect Germany's frontiers in the case of invasion," he said.

Turning to domestic affairs, General Goering regarded the position of the country as completely consolidated, but he added that the Government's programme would take years to carry out.

Communism, he said, had been overcome, but it was still dangerous. It could not be destroyed as long as it existed in other countries.

The Communists had recently increased their activities as the result of the mildness of the punishment now meted out in the concentration camps, and to counter this "I have decided to issue new draconic measures of punishment," he said.

COMMUNIST PRISONERS

There were six or seven thousand prisoners now in concentration camps, and most of them were Communists.

Asked whether there was any prospect of the release of Torgler, Thaelman or other Communist leaders, General Goering said that there was no question of that as a trial for high treason was pending.

Torgler, he said, was not having a bad time in prison, as he had long ago abandoned Communism.

Asked whether a Government with 99 per cent. of the country behind

FREE FIGHTS IN THE CORTES

New Amnesty In Spain Angers Socialists.

Madrid, To-day.

A general amnesty for political prisoners was voted in the Spanish Cortes yesterday. This will liberate General Sanjurjo and many others implicated in the Monarchist revolt and the De Rivera dictatorship.

The decision caused anger among the ultra-Republicans and Socialists and resulted in a free fight in the Cortes lasting for 10 minutes.

Bottles were thrown, and scuffles, kicks and blows were exchanged profusely.

One member was cut with broken glass.—Reuter.

U.S. AIR MAIL CONTRACTS.

Bidding Opened For 17 Major Routes.

2,000 ATTEND CEREMONY.

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received April 21, 8.32 a.m.)

Washington, To-day.

The ceremony was attended by 2,000 United States air line executives, yesterday, when the Post Office opened bids for temporary contracts for 17 major air mail routes in America.

The Trans-Continental and Western Air Line made a low bid for the former route to Newark, Kansas City and Los Angeles.

The United Air Line was the only bidder for the Newark-Salt Lake City-San Francisco route.—United Press, per S.C. Gold Bar Co.

PERRY DEFEATED BY YOUTH

Tennis Sensation At Southport.

Southport, To-day.

A sensation was caused in the British Inter-County Tennis Championship, yesterday, when, in the Middlesex-Warwickshire contest, C. Hare, the 18-year-old Warwickshire player, and former county champion, defeated F. J. Perry, the ranking No. 1 player. The scoring was 6-8, 3-6, 6-3.—Reuter.

It could not afford to be merciful, General Goering replied: "That is quite wrong. If one per cent. revolts and is not checked, it will immediately begin propaganda and nibble at the 99 per cent. Propaganda is always dangerous when one does nothing to counter it."—Reuter.

WORLD PRICE NOT TO BE BOOSTED

SILVER PROBLEM VIEWED AS INTERNATIONAL

SMALL HOPES FOR CONFERENCE WITH SENATORS TO-DAY

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received April 21, 8.20 a.m.)

WASHINGTON, TO-DAY.

THE WHITE HOUSE HAS INDICATED, CLEARLY THAT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT WILL REJECT ANY PLAN INVOLVING THE WHOLESALE PURCHASE OF SILVER FOR THE PURPOSE OF BOOSTING THE PRICE IN THE WORLD MARKET.

The White House has represented that President Roosevelt is convinced that the solution to the silver problem must be sought through an international agreement, and that President Roosevelt still stands on the silver-gold proposal presented to the World Economic Conference, which was not adopted.

Particular interest is attached to this statement on account of to-day's silver conference at the White House. The White House stated, emphatically that President Roosevelt does not intend to recommend any further silver legislation this session, nor does he contemplate indirect submission to the new silver proposals.

Therefore, it appears that the silver advocates will receive small comfort from the conference, the status of which is somewhat confused owing to the uncertainty of the source of the invitation. It was at first reported that the President had invited the conference but later, the White House explained that he had merely agreed to receive the delegation.—United Press, per S. C. Gold Bar Co.

SILVER ADVOCATES DETERMINED.

Meet This Morning To Fix Programme.

Washington, To-day.

Senator King has called a meeting of the Steering Committee of the Senate silver bloc, for this morning, to formulate a programme to be presented to President Roosevelt, later.

The bloc leaders deny the reports that they have agreed to accept permissive rather than mandatory legislation.

Senator Borah states that he is not interested in permissive legislation, and indicates that he will not attend the White House conference this afternoon.—Reuter.

POLICY AT W.E.C. FAVOURED.

World Co-operation Needed.

Washington, To-day.

It has been made known by the White House that President Roosevelt feels that the answer to the silver remonetisation problem lies in the formula presented at the World Economic Conference, whereby all nations fix definite reserves of silver in ratio to their gold supply.

He feels that it is impossible for one nation to tackle the problem without the co-operation of all countries.

President Roosevelt confers, to-day, with the Senate silver advocates, but in consequence of the foregoing statement, he is expected to stand firmly against any mandatory silver legislation this session.—Reuter.

NO LEGISLATION

Washington, earlier.

On the eve of the conference between President Roosevelt and the Senate silver advocates, it is indicated at the White House that

MORE OPTIMISM IN AMERICA

"Return To Prosperity Guaranteed."

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received April 21, 8.22 a.m.)

NEW YORK, TO-DAY.

The New York market experts Messrs. Dunn and Bradstreet, state that merchants are generally assuming a more cheerful attitude regarding the future than has been evident for three or four years.

"It seems certain that the peak of the season's buying will not be reached until the later part of May, with much carried over into June," they state.

The New York journal, "Annalist," states that the cumulative nature of the normal recovery forces virtually guarantees the eventual return to prosperity, although artificial stimulants, plus the uncertain labour situation, may cause occasional disappointing setbacks.

The market is bullish regarding the cyclical upswing in stock prices, the journal adds.—United Press, per S.C. Gold Bar Co.

ANOTHER WINDFALL FOR EXCHEQUER

London, To-day.

Death duties amounting to £398,345 have already been paid on the estate of the late Lord Faringdon, which was valued at £1,021,696.—British Wireless Service.

President Roosevelt does not wish any silver legislation at this session of Congress.

It is stated that he regards silver very much as an unknown quantity, and as a problem for international negotiations, rather than for national action.—Reuter.

CANADA'S NEW GOLD TAX DECLARED ONEROUS

Likely To Retard Mining Industry Development

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received April 21, 8.22 a.m.)

Montreal, To-day.

Gold miners throughout Canada are protesting that the new tax of 10 per cent. on newly-mined gold, is onerous, and likely to retard the gold mining industry, and the rearing of new capital and the opening and developing of new properties.—United Press, per S.C. Gold Bar Co.

RIOTS RENEWED IN PARIS

Over 1,000 Arrested; Many Injured.

Paris, To-day.

Over 1,000 people were detained, and many heads were broken, when thousands of French Police and Mobile Guards forcibly prevented masses of Socialists and Communists from approaching the Place de l'Hotel de Ville, yesterday, where they intended to hold a huge meeting of protest against the cuts in the salaries of civil servants, against the Government, and against Fascism.

Scenes reminiscent of the February riots were witnessed, but the Police, who were well-prepared, gained the upper hand, and finally dispersed the demonstrators after fierce clashes.

All the foreigners among the detained people are to be expelled from the country.—Reuter.

WEATHER FORECAST

Moderate east winds, generally cloudy, is the forecast contained in the official weather report issued by the Royal Observatory this morning.

NEW GENEVA CONFERENCE ADVOCATED

Britain's Efforts For Disarmament.

FRENCH NOTE CREATES GRAVE POSITION

London, To-day.

The Cabinet Disarmament Committee, which met on Thursday, following an interview between the Foreign Secretary, Sir John Simon, and Mr. Arthur Henderson, President of the Disarmament Conference, held a further meeting yesterday, and again reviewed the situation in the light of the latest development.

There is no inclination, here, to minimise the gravity of the position created by the breakdown in the diplomatic conversations, but there are indications that, despite the discouragement thus caused, the British efforts will not be relaxed.

A renewed attempt to secure a convention is strongly urged by the Manchester Guardian, which states that the terms of the French note make impossible the continuance of conversations but do not render further efforts at the Disarmament Conference impossible.

"There is no reason why France or Britain or the five smaller Powers who lately propounded a plan should not make their own proposal at Geneva," the newspaper states. (Continued on Page 9)

FORGED FRENCH PASSPORT

Russian Gaoled For One Month.

Joseph Swionitzky, 46 years, a Russian of Warsaw, was charged before Mr. E. W. Hamilton at the Central Magistracy this morning, for being in possession of a false passport and for entering the Colony without a passport.

Defendant pleaded guilty to the charges.

Detective-Sergeant Mottram said that the defendant is the husband of the woman who was sentenced to one month's imprisonment, two days ago, for abducting at Lane, Crawford's. At the time of the abduction, the accused was seen accompanying the woman, but slipped away when his wife was caught. (Continued on Page 9)

TOKIOPOLICY DENOUNCED

"JAPANESE HEGEMONY IN ASIA"

CHINESE WILL NOT AGREE.

STRONG STATEMENT BY LONDON LEGATION

London, To-day.

A statement denouncing the Tokyo declaration has been issued by the Chinese Legation, here.

The statement declares that "Tokyo's declaration of policy in regard to China is nothing but a re-affirmation of Japan's traditional policy of aggression and expansion on the mainland of Asia."

"Japan's policy is directly, opposed to the promotion of peace and order in the Far East," the statement continues.

"The Chinese people are conscious of their rights and obligations and as an independent Sovereign nation, will not subscribe to this baseless doctrine of a Japanese hegemony in Asia."—Reuter.

SENATOR KING'S OUTBURST.

Reprehensible Tokyo Policy.

Washington, To-day.

While Government officials refrain from commenting on Japan's statement of her position in the Orient, Senator King, in a statement branding the move, declares:

"It is reprehensible, and openly calculated to disturb peace in the Orient and the world."

Expressing disappointment at Japan's course, he declared that he would present his views to the Senate, very shortly.

"It is to be hoped that before it is too late, Japan will return to the paths of peace and earnestly co-operate with all nations to promote world concord," he said.—Reuter.

CHINA AND TURKEY

Establish Diplomatic Relations.

Geneva, To-day.

China has established Diplomatic relations with Turkey, as the result of the visit of Mr. Victor Hoo, Chinese Minister to Switzerland, to Ankara, where he signed, with the Turkish Foreign Minister, Dr. Tewfik Rustu Bey, a convention for the establishment of diplomatic relations.

The convention will be ratified at Geneva, next month after adoption by both Governments, when Ministers will be appointed.

This convention will be followed by a treaty of commerce, friendship, and non-aggression.—Reuter.

The forthcoming wedding of Mr. Ardon Omond Hyland, Deputy Commissioner of Chinese Postal Services, of No. 4, British Consession, Shamsen, and Miss Phyllis May Capell of No. 9, Torres Buildings, Kowloon, is announced.

ENSEMBLES ENJOY POPULARITY

Boudoir Beauty

Quaint double-puff sleeves add a distinctive note of charm to the exquisite negligee worn by Miss Merkel, screen player. The creation is of flesh-colored satin, touched at the neckline and wrists with Alençon lace.

COLOUR WILL BE KEYNOTE.

Impressive Materials For Spring.

ALPACA MAY BECOME POPULAR

Spring has come and brought with it a riot of delicious things. But what is most impressive are the materials. Have never seen more lovely colours and textures than are offered this season.

Colour counts enormously this Spring. There are all the rainbow colours from which to choose, in three or four shades of each. The manufacturers have made ensembles of one colour, and also different shades of one colour, and also different weights of the material. And in the ensemble is included a figured fabric which goes with any one of the different shades.

One Shade Only

It sounds much more complicated than it is, because all you have to do is to choose one shade in a light weight for your dress and another shade in a heavier weight for your coat, and then the figured fabric can be used either as a blouse, a lining, or for decorating the bodice, with a scarf and, perhaps, a hat as well. Another idea is to have the dress in figured material and the coat in a plain fabric.

All the figure materials for day dresses show little checks, or stripes in irregular groups and shades. There are some spots a good many tweed patterns, but no flowers in wool. These are left to silks and cottons. Patterns are usually small, but bold, and the lines in many cases are either in relief on a fine canvas surface, or the material is frankly crepe, with a more or less ribbed surface. The diagonal line is less popular.

Garden Of Flowers

Afternoon dresses in figure crepe de chine are like gardens of fields full of wild flowers. Many of them have dark backgrounds and bunches of flowers sparsely set on them. This may sound a little dull, but it is not. Think of navy blue, or brown, patterned with little bunches of the gayest flowers in the most lovely colours. Lighter coloured backgrounds covered with tiny daisies are also shown. It is a daisy year. Every kind of daisy comes into the Blanchini patterns in all colours, pale and vivid. Poppies and cornflowers also are going to charm us. Then there are the stiff designs on navy, black, brown, and white, and lots of little all-over designs. Just the choices for a useful every-day go-out-to-ten-and-bridge sort of frock.

For the evening there are L'organette, both resembling stiffened muslin or organdie. The first is perfect in white with smallish black checks finely outlined, or stripes set in groups. L'organette is muslin with a small cotton stitch finely and unevenly distributed. There will be no end to the lovely, light materials for afternoon wear, and for the evening any amount of flowered chiffons, but no big patterns.

Alpaca's Future

Black and white taffeta is used for smart little day frocks and jackets. Checked and striped artificial silk materials are used to make tailor-made sports dresses. Some alpaca is used; it may become a rage.

Full backs for evening frocks, slender lines for the daytime, and an attempt at a definitely marked waistline—these are three certainties. But every girl likes to have pretty, easy-to-wear frocks for the Summer, so there will be plenty of these. An extra little dose of graciousness will be seen in the line of the Summer skirts; some of them may even be tempestuous, as the poet has it. Short sleeves, open necks, a waistline, and some fullness in the back of the skirt—there you have the main line of the Summer silhouette. The fullness at the back may set higher than it was last year; it may start at the waist and flow to graceful lines.

Spring Style Notes.

Style notes for Spring are certain lips, fingernails and toenails worn with a silver evening gown and silver kid toeless evening shoes.

Shimmering Satin

Simplicity is the keynote of this white satin formal gown worn by Myrna Loy, screen player. It has a draped décolletage, held at the front with a diamond-and-ruby double pin, draped to waistline at back. The subtle tone of jewelry is finished off with diamond-and-ruby bracelets and eadorn.

STRIKING EVENING ENSEMBLES

"White Lily," Patou's Latest Creation.

COURTOUT'S SAPPHIRE DINNER GOWN

Paris.

"White Lily" is the name Patou gives to one of his most striking evening ensembles in all white. The gown itself is made of white mat jersey sleek and slender, in line to the knee when fullness appears from nowhere and floats around the legs to the floor. The front décolletage is, of course, high while the back swoops down to the waistline. The accompanying coat is three-quarters in length, falls loosely and when wrapped across the body is held in place—there is no fastening. The sleeves from shoulder to elbow are full and chaped like double morning glories, while from the elbow to the wrist they are tight with deep cuffs of white chenille, closely clipped but slightly curly to resemble astrakhan. There is also a collar of the same with wide revers.

Edmond Courtout does queer little quirks with fur. On a dress of gray wool with steel spangle embroidery at the neckline he runs a strip of black astrakhan material round the throat, two narrow arms of it out and over the tip of each shoulder, and two more strips the same width down the front, swerving outward at the waist toward the hips. Effective to say the least. Again, on a dinner gown of sapphire, he uses strips of silver fox from shoulder tip to elbow of the accompanying jacket, which is also trimmed with a fluff of the same fur as a diminutive collar.

Style notes for Spring are certain lips, fingernails and toenails worn with a silver evening gown and silver kid toeless evening shoes.

Baby Bonnet Hats Popular In Paris

Knitted Styles Worn With Chin Ties.

We've been approaching it for some time, but now we've actually arrived at the baby bonnet hat stage, tied under the chin et al. Mile Colette Rosambert, the pretty French tennis star, is sponsoring the vogue. Hers is a knitted affair in black with little turn-up tabs in front and back and a knitted bow tied directly under the chin.

Other versions of this grownup hat fad are in straw, felt and straw combinations, and in fabric matching ensembles for spring. There is no argument about the comfort of these bonnets—even the infants seldom fret about them—and while we allow for a difference of opinion as to the efficacy of the chin ties to turn back effects off the forehead are becoming too many.

We discussed the matter with one milliner here who has arranged for the ties to turn back from the ears and make their bow at the nape of the neck. This isn't had at all, and one or two Dutch bonnet effects have met with real favour from the younger set. Barretts and queer-shaped knitted head coverings seem to have met with such complete success last season that there is no ousting them in 1934. Knitting and crocheting is no longer a homely business, and the mode has worked its way into formal evening attire as well. Gold and silver threads, metal and silk work into delicate, delicate, evening bags, sweaters, jackets and gloves.

COMPLEXION RUINED BY TOO MUCH POWDER

Lotion Should Be Used On "Moth Patches."

RED NOSE TROUBLE

Many girls who have poor complexions double their efforts with powder-puff and vanishing-cream, and, instead of curing, make matters worse.

Take spots, for instance. They need clean, hygienic treatment—not the constantly-used powder-puff which is never washed. If the cause of the pimples is not deep-seated, local treatment will often help to cure them. An excellent lotion is: Milk of sulphur, one drachm; tincture of camphor, one drachm and rosewater, four ounces. This may be applied several times a day.

Green salads and ripe fruit should be eaten, but sweets must be avoided. On rising and at bed-time drink plenty of cold water.

"Moth Patches" are due to a deposit of pigment in the true skin. A good lotion for them is a mixture of one ounce of lemon juice and two ounces of bay rum, which may be dabbed on the spots night and morning.

Scars left by face blemishes sometimes remain for a long time. Gentle massage with cold cream will generally bring about an improvement, but patience will be needed.

Some girls are troubled with red noses. The nose is very easily affected by various internal disorders, and it will be wise to ask a doctor about the cause. Frequently the defect is due to eye trouble, or to tightness of some part of the clothing.

This lotion is excellent for local application: Powdered calamine, one drachm; glycerine, one-half drachm; cherry laurel water, four ounces. Shake well and apply morning and evening.

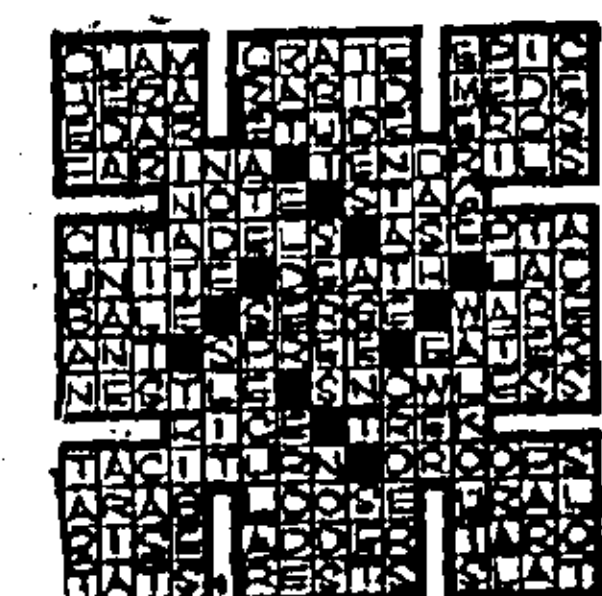

Do not use cold cream or the deodorant boys—with a blue bird like before exposing your face to wind or sun—but afterwards,

YESTERDAY'S SOLUTION

YOUNG DESIGNER'S TRIMMING

Whole Birds Instead Of Feathers Used

A young designer, well known for the originality and modern tailoring of his clothes, has played a joke on women.

Not satisfied with trimming his evening frocks with a few feathers, as other dressmakers have occasionally done, he used entire birds.

The first arrival in the salons was a gown which had a slim little bird with a jewel-encrusted beak lying cooily on the shoulder. But the next startled even hardened buyers. It was a black satin frock with a large white seagull with wings spread clamped upon the chest.

Finally there was a pale blue dress—the kind of frock which the debutante buys—with a blue bird like before exposing your face to wind or sun—but afterwards,

Lt.-Cdr. Leigh's Fine Work In Colony.

EFFORTS IN ARRANGING MALAYAN TOUR

Lt. Comdr. F. B. Leigh, R.N. (H.M.S. Medway) relinquished his duties as Naval Hockey Secretary yesterday to Surg. Lt. Comdr. A. E. Phillips, R.N. (H.M.S. Suffolk), after the final match of the Triangular Hockey Tournament between the Navy and Club, which he umpired.

Lt. Comdr. Leigh leaves Hong Kong on Thursday by H.M.S. Calcutta for Hankow, prior to sailing for Home for good. It is improbable that he will return to the Colony. Comdr. Leigh came to Hong Kong in September 1931 and ever since has been closely connected with local hockey. Besides being one of the founders of the Hong Kong Hockey Association, Comdr. Leigh was mainly responsible for the institution of the Umpiring Board, as a result of which quite a number of qualified umpires have been passed out.

It was also through his untiring efforts and personal contact with the Malayan Hockey representatives which resulted in the first real inter-port contest in the Colony.

In a parting interview with a representative of the China Mail, Comdr. Leigh said that it was extremely gratifying to note the progress made in hockey since his arrival. It had been a great pleasure for him to give what little help he could offer and wished the Hong Kong Hockey Association even more success in the future. In a final word, Comdr. Leigh said that he hoped the Association would have a larger number of playing fields at their disposal in future, as this, he considered, was one of the biggest drawbacks to the sport in the Colony.

CLUB BEAT NAVY BY FOUR GOALS TO NIL

Triangular Hockey Tournament.

OWEN-HUGHES SCORES THREE TIMES

The Hong Kong Hockey Club gained their first and only victory in the Triangular Hockey Tournament yesterday at King's Park, when they defeated the Navy, the leaders, by 4 clear goals.

Compiling a score of 3 goals to nil in the first half, the Club proved to be the much stronger team and held the majority of play throughout.

The Navy were a disappointing team, their forwards failing to produce the usual dash and combination for which they are well-known.

H. Owen-Hughes, at centre, forward for the Club, was the pick of the team scoring 3 of the 4 goals. His neat combined play with Mackay on his right and Potter on his left was a feature of the game.

The intermediate line were also very sound and their fine tackling broke up every attempt of the naval forwards before they became dangerous.

Lowe worked very hard in the pivot, and W. A. Reed completely subdued Lt. Comdr. Atkinson on the left-wing.

Geo. Duncan in goal for the Club, was not often tested, but proved safe on each occasion.

Lt. Donald on the right-wing, was missed from the naval forward line, as this had the effect of breaking up the combination. The naval defence was heavily taxed but Surg. Lt. Comdr. Phillips was very strong at left-back and clearly strongly.

H. Owen-Hughes opened the scoring early in the game, followed by another goal by Noronha. Owen-Hughes again netted before the teams changed over.

The Navy put up a much better display in the second half and made several determined attacks but without result. Owen-Hughes put the Club further ahead after 20 minutes of play in a brilliant solo effort, scoring with a hard drive.

The Club were still pressing hard when the final whistle came. The following were the teams.

H. K. Club:—Geo. Duncan; J. Rodger, A. A. Dand, W. A. Reed; H. J. D. Lowe, E. V. Reed, W. Wood; N. A. E. Mackay, H. Owen-Hughes, J. E. Potter and J. E. Noronha.

Navy:—Stoker Holt; Lt. Comdr. Tidd, Surg. Lt. Comdr. Phillips; Lt. Comdr. Hill, Lt. Muspratt, Mid. Poulton; Lt. Comdr. Neame, Lt. Eaden, Lt. Curry, Lt. Bartlett and Lt. Comdr. Atkinson.

Macao Score 8 Goals Without Reply.

Playing in Macao yesterday, the visiting Malayan Overseas Chinese Hockey team were defeated in their first match by 8 goals to nil.

The Portuguese team proved superior in all departments of the game and displaying better team-work, completely overwhelmed their visitors.

The Malayan Chinese will meet the United Services on the Hong Kong Football Club ground to-morrow at 3 p.m. in their first match in Hong Kong.

Australia's Team For Empire Games

Ten Men And Two Women Athletes

SEVERAL BRILLIANT PERFORMERS

Ten men and two women have been selected to represent Australia at the British Empire Games in England in August.

ATHLETES

J. P. Metcalfe (N.S.W.), running broad jump, high jump, and hop, step, and jump.

F. I. Woodhouse (Vic.), pole vault.

H. S. Yates (Vic.), 100, 220, and 440 yards.

BOXER

L. Cook (Qld.), lightweight.

CYCLISTS

E. L. Gray (N.S.W.), time trial.

H. Pethybridge (N.S.W.), sprinter.

SWIMMERS

R. Clark (N.S.W.), backstroke and medley race.

Miss C. Dennis (N.S.W.), breaststroke.

A. Higginson (Vic.), breaststroke and medley.

N. P. Ryan (N.S.W.), sprint, distance, and medley.

Miss L. Thompson (Vic.), springboard and tower diving.

WRESTLER

R. E. Gerrard (Vic.), light weight.

Mr. H. K. Maxwell was elected manager of the team.

The selectors recommended that two Australian athletes at present in England should be included in the team. These are:—

J. C. Horroff (Vic.), 220 and 440 yards.

H. W. Londer (Vic.), 880 yards and one mile.

It was also suggested that additional funds be raised to send Dr. MacLardy, of Victoria, for the 120 yards hurdles.

Measrs. H. G. Alderson (rowing and sculling), H. R. Maxwell (cycling), H. Bennett (swimming), H. B. Weir (athletics), and W. W. Scott (boxing and wrestling) presented their report as selectors to the second annual meeting of the Australian British Empire Games' Association at the New South Wales Sports Club. Mr. Scott acted in the absence of Mr. F. G. Underwood, who was absent owing to illness.

The team is a strong one, but notable omissions were G. A. Golding, Australian 440 yards flat and hurdles champion and record-holder, and Miss Bonnie Mealing, backstroke swimmer, both of whom were included in Australia's team at the Olympic Games. New South Wales has six representatives, Victoria five, and Queensland one.

Golding's qualifications are higher than those of Yates. He is the holder of the Empire 440 yards title, and finished second in the hurdle race over a similar distance in Canada. His 48 4-5s there has not been equalled in the Empire during the past summer. Yates' times have improved since the Australian championships, and apparently as the Victorian is seven years younger than Golding his age has been taken into consideration with a view to representation at the Olympic Games in 1936.

The members of the team must sign a fidelity bond and agreement similar to the conditions imposed upon Australia's representatives at Olympic Games. They must also submit to a medical examination, which will be made by Dr. K. Kirkland (New South Wales), Dr. McAdam (Victoria), and Dr. Kelly (Queensland).

Passengers have been booked for 14 persons on the Orient liner Ormonde, which sails on May 28. An appeal is to be made immediately for £300, the amount required in addition to funds in hand, the guarantee of $1000 from the council in England, and a Commonwealth Government grant of $500.

2 RECORDS BROKEN

BRILLIANT SWIMMING AT TRIALS

Canton Sprinter Wins 50 Metres.

HONG KONG CHAMPION'S RECORD IN 400 METRES

An enthusiastic crowd at the Chinese Y.M.C.A., Bridges Street, swimming pool last night saw two national records shattered when the pick of China's aquatic stars clashed for the honour of representing their country in the Far Eastern Olympic Games in Manila next month.

Chan Ki-tung, the Canton flash, broke Dar Po-tung's China record of 28.4 seconds in the 50 metres which he established at the Eighth Far Eastern Olympiad in 1927, by clocking 27 4/5 seconds, while Lau Po-hi, the Colony swimmer, succeeded in re-setting his last Saturday's mark of 1.21 seconds in the 100 metres breast stroke to beat his own national record which he negotiated in 1.23.3 seconds at the National Athletic Meeting in Nanking last year.

Chan Ki-tung secured second place in the 50 metres final in Nanking last Autumn.

Taking a lead after the plunge, Chan Ki-tung did not fare as well in the 400 metres. After a few rounds of the 20 metres long tank he began to weaken and left the water in his 14th lap.

Meanwhile Chan Chun-nam (Hong Kong) was leading and cheered by the spectators as he touched the finishing line to clip off 10 3/5 seconds from his last Saturday's record of 6.24 3/5 seconds.

Kwok Chun-hang, the Colony's long distance breast stroke swimmer, who won the 1500 metres events last Saturday finished in 6 minutes 38 seconds.

Results were as follow:—

50 Metres (Men's):—
1. Chan Ki-tung
2. Chan Jen-hing
3. Wong Sau-shan
Time: 27 4/5 secs.

Also swam:—Ng Chih-min, Wenz Yat-hung, and Lau Po-hi.

100 Metres (Women's):—
1. Chan Woon-king
2. Leung Wing-han
3. Lau Kwai-chun
Time: 40 2/5 secs.

100 Metres Back Stroke (Men's):—
1. Lau Po-hi
2. Shek Kam-pui
3. Pau Lai
Time: 1.21.0 secs.

100 Metres Back Stroke (Women's):—
1. Leung Wing-han
2. Lau Kwai-chun
3. Chan Woon-king
Time: 1.45 secs.

400 Metres (Men's):—
1. Chan Chun-nam
2. Kwok Chun-hang
3. Wong Sau-shan
Time: 6.24 secs.

Also swam:—Tsang Ho-look, and Chan Ki-tung.

To-day's Events.

To-day's events at the Chinese Y.M.C.A. will conclude the swimming trials, and names of the winning swimmers will be forwarded to Shanghai where the final selection will be made.

According to Mr. Yeung Chun-nam, Manager of the swimming section of the South China Athletic Association, the 1500 metres scheduled for to-night may be cancelled as the four Cantonese are not going in. This leaves the honour for this event among Kwok Chun-hang, Mak Wai-ming and Shek Kam-pui, all of Hong Kong.

The Competitors

The following are the events and competitors for to-night's trials:—
200 metres breast stroke (men's):—Lau Lai (Canton), Kwok Chun-hang (Hong Kong), Mei Tze-chung (Hong Kong), and Wong Sau-shan (Hong Kong).
100 metres breast stroke (women's):—Chan Woon-king, Leung Wing-han and Lau Kwai-chun.

FIVE OPEN EVENTS AT KOWLOON BAY

YACHT CLUB AND V.R.C. CHALLENGE CANTON

MANY NEW OARSMEN IN CREWS

Canton and the Victoria Recreation Club will take part in the final rowing regatta of the season, which is being staged this afternoon by the Royal Hong Kong Yacht Club at Kowloon Bay.

A very spirited attempt to receive the interest in rowing has taken place this season, notable among the achievements being the revival of the V.R.C.'s Rowing Regatta, after a lapse of 11 years, last November. A keen struggle in this last regatta resulted in a narrow victory for Canton over the Yacht Club, the V.R.C. walking away with the Senior Pairs event for the second year in succession.

COMPETITION TO-DAY PROMISES TO BE EXTRAORDINARILY KEEN AS ALL THREE CLUBS HAVE BEEN IN CONSTANT TRAINING THROUGHOUT THE PAST MONTHS IN PREPARATION FOR THE FINAL CLASH.

Course Moved To Kowloon

Notable this year is the transfer of the course from North Point, to Kowloon Bay, over the same stretch used by the V. R. C. last November. This course, which lies beyond Channel Rocks, the starting line being off Tan Ka Tsing Village and the finish off Black Boulders Point, is an admirable one, offering smooth water and a clear straightaway with full line of vision for the spectators.

Canton For Seniors Only

Canton Rowing Club, who will also compete in the Regatta will only enter crews for the Senior fours and pairs races. The junior and novice events will be fought out between the Yacht Club and the V. R. C.

Many changes and new names have appeared in the crews of all the three clubs since last November.

H. W. Duley, Senior Stroke and G. S. P. Haywood are two of the senior crew who are out, although the latter will as coxswain for the senior boat. H. W. Duley is unable to take his position owing to pressure of work.

Two promising juniors, B. L. E. Hebert and P. de N. Ramus have been promoted from the Junior fours. Ramus will stroke the boat while Hebert will be seen at No. 3.

With two out of the junior fours, practically a new junior crew has been formed, although many of them are experienced oarsmen. A new name, A. Reid, appears in the novice, boat at bow, while the rest are again in their order.

Canton Promotions

Included in the names which have been mentioned as probabilities in the Canton fours crew are W. Cameron and Frolish. The former stroked the junior boat at the V. R. C. Regatta, but Frolish, although well-known, has not taken part for sometime. Owen is mentioned as cox instead of W. Seiffert, while B. Rasmussen will stroke the crew for the first time.

V.R.C. Crews

The V. R. C. are entering all events with crews which have 100 metres (women's):—Leung Wing-han, Chan Woon-king and Lau Kwai-chun.

100 metres (men's):—Chan Ki-tung, Chan Jen-hing, Wong Sau-shan, Tsang Ho-look, Chan Chun-nam and Kwok Chun-hang.
100 metres breast stroke (women's):—Chan Woon-king, Leung Wing-han and Lau Kwai-chun.

been in strict training for the past several months. J. R. Soares has been promoted from the juniors to the Senior fours crew and a change about in position has given the given the boat a much better balance.

The junior and novice crews are also shaping well and their chances this year are brighter than ever.

The Programme

3.30 p.m. Murdoch Kennett Challenge Cup for Senior Pairs;

NIGEL SHARPE WINS AT QUEEN'S CLUB

Tinkler Beaten In Five Sets.

In the final of the singles of the Queen's Club covered courts tournament recently R. K. Tinkler N. Sharpe waged a battle over five sets.

The first set went to Sharpe 6-2, and his accurate driving found a weakness in his opponent's backhand. Tinkler improved in the second set, which he won 6-4. Both were volleying successfully, but if anything the advantage in passing shots rested with Sharpe, who went ahead by taking the third set at 6-3.

The squad starts intensive training to-day under the coaching of John Ma of Tsinghua University. Peiping, and Dr. C. C. Yung of Kwanghua University, Shanghai. A staff of four other experts will assist the two head coaches and it is expected that China ought to do better than the last meeting at Tokyo in 1930 when she won only one point through the efforts of Seto Kwang in the Hop, Step and Jump.

LAWN TENNIS MEETING.

Interport Committee Selected.

At an extraordinary general meeting of the Lawn Tennis Association held yesterday, a resolution to wipe out the existing regulation for the payment of an annual affiliation fee of $20 and to make it into one payment once and for all was passed.

Mr. M. K. Lo presided over the meeting in the absence of Mr. Justice Lindsell, President of the Association, others present being Mr. S. A. Gray (Hon. Secretary), Mr. D. S. Green (Hon. Treasurer) and representatives from the other affiliated clubs.

The proposal was put forward by Mr. R. Chou and seconded by Mr. R. Basa. It was carried by a large majority.

A further proposal by Mr. Chou that the entrance fee for each team in the Tennis League should be increased from $10 to $15 a year was also passed by a large majority.

A meeting of the Council then followed, the following committees being appointed: Executive Committee—Messrs. H. J. Armstrong, A. el Arculli, Leo D'Almeida, Jr., and Capt. P. S. Cannon.

Interport Selection Committee—Mr. Justice Lindsell, Mr. E. C. Fincher, Mr. Tsui Wai-pui, Mr. S. A. Gray and Mrs. Litton.

(Left) Jean Borotra, of France who has held the title four times, was considered to be the greatest menace to the hopes of Gregory Mangin (right) American, National Indoor Lawn Tennis, defending champion, to retain his laurels, but Lester Stoecken provided the upset by beating Mangin in the Final.

Australia's Team for Empire Games

Applications are to be called for the position of masseur-trainer. The appointment of a chaplain was referred to the executive committee.

Persons not selected in the Australian team will not be permitted to compete at their own expense.

RECORDS REVIEWED

Notable Performers.

The athletes selected to represent Australia at the Empire Games in England have notable performances to their credit.

J. P. Metcalfe, of the Sydney University Club, came into prominence as a member of Sydney High Schools' team in the Great Public Schools' championships, and his high jump record of 5ft 10in. created in 1929, stood until D. R. Shettliffe added an inch and a half in 1932. He is to-day one of the world's best performers in the running high jump, and hop, step, and jump. His 6ft 6in. for a high jump, which is an Australian record, is only two inches short of the world's best. Metcalfe also holds the hop, step, and jump record of 50ft 2½in. and the broad jump figures of 24ft 0½in.

There are few athletes in the Empire who can approach these performances, and Metcalfe appears likely to be a triple winner. He is at present in New Zealand, where he has set new Dominion figures. Metcalfe is studying law at the Sydney University. He was unable to make the trip to Adelaide for the Australian championships in January.

F. I. Woodhouse is the Australian pole vault champion and record holder. In Sydney, on December 26, 1932, he set the present figures of 12ft 10in. and won the Australian title in January by clearing 12ft 6½in. His best effort will doubtless win in England, as the last Empire Games event was won at 12ft 3in. and the best performance in Great Britain this season was 12ft 6½in.

H. S. Yates, the Victorian sprinter, after finishing third to N. Dempsey, of Queensland, and the New South Wales representative, T. E. Hampson, in the Australian 100 yards championship, won the 220 yards race in 22s, and he has been credited with 21½s. He is the Victorian sprint champion, and his best time for 100 yards was 9 4-5s, one tenth of a second better than the 1930 time, and the best in Great Britain this season.

L. Cook is the Australian and Queensland lightweight champion. He is 19 years of age, and has had 29 contests. His victories include 21 on knock-outs and seven on points, and he has had one draw.

Clever Cyclist.

This will be Duncan Gray's third trip abroad, and second to England, as an official representative of Australia. He has been the most successful amateur cyclist sent abroad, being the only one to win a great international contest so far. He won the 1000 metres time trial Olympic championship at Los Angeles, and in 1923 finished third in the same event at the Olympic Games at Amsterdam. Gray, after showing poor form last year after his return from America, regain his best form this season, and won four of the nine State amateur championships and 10 miles Australian championship; he won the all-round track championship of the State from H. Pethybridge, who had held it for the previous two years.

Horace Pethybridge has been a successful all-round amateur cyclist in Sydney for several years. He has several times won the all-round track championship of New South Wales at the Velodrome, Canterbury, and has also won many Australian and New South Wales championships. He established an unbroken road record from Newcastle to Sydney a few years ago, and was a member of the Marrickville Club's road premiership team which has such a great record of wins. Pethybridge shines best in races which are run at high sustained speed, but has also a telling sprint.

Ryan's Records

Noel Ryan holds every New South Wales championship from 110 yards to a mile free-style, and has broken many records, State and Australian, during the past six months. He is the only swimmer who holds a British Empire title, having won the 1500 yards in Canada three years ago.

R. Clark is a brilliant all-round athlete, but shines as a sprint and backstroke swimmer. He was placed a good second to Noel Ryan in the 100 yards national championship of Australia in Sydney last month, and won the backstroke championship of Australia, beating the holder of many records, V. Besomo, in 1m. 6 1-5s. Clark also holds the 330 yards medley (backstroke, breaststroke, and freestyle) championship of New South Wales. While a pupil at the Sydney High School, he played Rugby Union football, rowed, boxed, took part in athletics, and won swimming championships. Clark recently entered the University, and early this week won the freshmen's diving championship.

Miss Claire Dennis.

Miss Clare Dennis is considered one of the most perfect exponents of breaststroke swimming in Australia, and holds the women's 200 metres Olympic championship. This will be her second trip abroad as a representative of the country—she holds the New South Wales and Australian championship, and practically every woman's breaststroke record for Australia.

A Higginson is a Victorian breaststroke swimmer, who has twice in succession won the Australian 220 yards championship. Last year his time was 2m 56 4-5s; this year, in Sydney, he won in 2m 57 2-5s; lowering the New South Wales record. Higginson has covered 220 yards breaststroke in time almost equal to the Australian record held by Frank McCure, of New South Wales.

Miss Lesley Thompson is a Victorian girl who brilliantly won the women's national springboard diving championship in Sydney last month.

R. E. Gerrard, 23 years of age, is Australian wrestling champion, and has won the last two contests by straight falls. He has also been successful for the last three years in the Victorian cham-

THE WORLD'S CHESS CHAMPIONSHIP.

Fifth Game Drawn.

ALEKHINE NOW WELL AHEAD

Villingen, Apr. 14.

The fifth game in the world chess championship match between Dr. Alekhine and Dr. Bogoljubov, after it had lasted for nearly eight hours, ended in a draw, whereby each competitor scored half a point.

The play was highly interesting. Alekhine started with a slight advantage and, despite exceedingly skillful play by Bogoljubov, the world champion succeeded in holding his own. The score for Alekhine is now 3½ points, and for Bogoljubov 1½ points.

The sixth game will be played next Wednesday, at Freiburg.—Trans-Ocean Kuo Min.

Mr. H. K. Maxwell, who has been appointed manager of the British Empire team, has been a well-known figure in amateur sport for 30 years. He came into prominence as an amateur cyclist, being a member of the original Enfield Club, and was captain of its road team which won the Dunlop Shield road premiership of New South Wales outright in 1905 and 1906. He also won the 10 miles amateur championship of Australia, beating, among other great riders of the day, a famous Queensland rider, Percy Berry. For the past 10 years, Mr. Maxwell has devoted his energies to the administrative side of the sport, and was recently re-elected as hon. secretary of the Australian Amateur Cyclists' Association. He has held the hon. secretaryship of the New South Wales Cyclists' Union for several years. Mr. Maxwell also represents the amateur cyclists on the committee of the British Empire Games and the Australian Olympic committee.

CONTROLLING THE VOICE.Englishmen Tributed By Film Expert.

Hollywood, California. The voice of an Englishman is more easily controlled than that of an American, according to Mr. Al Rockett, Fox Film producer.

Mr. Rockett made this discovery upon casting Hugh Williams, the young London screen and stage actor, for the principal role in "All Men Are Enemies."

"American audiences sometimes have difficulty in understanding the lines spoken by English actors," Mr. Rockett explains. "This, of course, does not always hold true. However, it is not difficult for the Englishman to learn to speak with almost a pure American accent. On the other hand, American actors untrained in England, have an exceedingly difficult time of it when they try to speak English as the English do."—Reuter.

FEEDING PROBLEM IN SOVIETRabbits, Emus And Mushrooms Tried.*SOLUTION STILL UNDISCOVERED

Moscow. The authorities here are trying to find something to eat.

Food experts are anxious to discover a new kind of food, at once nourishing and easy to obtain, that will solve the feeding problem of the U. S. S. R.

Three times they thought had hit upon the right idea. But they have had to admit failure in each case.

First—they thought of rabbits. As it was estimated, 150 rabbits equal one cow in food value and since rabbits breed at a tremendous rate, it seemed the ideal solution.

Posters accordingly appeared urging factories, workers, offices, in fact everyone, to breed rabbits.

Unfortunately, the rabbits defied scientific calculation by persistently catching cold and dying off.

Secondly—the experts turned to the giant emu, that ostrich-like bird, for feeding purposes, but these were no more successful than rabbits.

Thirdly—the experts thought of mushrooms. Mushrooms are very high in vitamins and grow quickly. It was thought that they might be grown in ordinary cellars—but this scheme has failed as well.

So now the experts are searching for some other solution of the food problem. The people, meanwhile, carry on with their traditional menu of black bread, herrings and cabbage.—Reuter.

SUN BONNETS FOR HORSESS.P.C.A. Experiment In Cape Town.*NOT THE FIRST ATTEMPT

Cape Town (Cape Province). Cape Town may soon see all its horses, mules and donkeys wearing sun bonnets if the S.P.C.A. idea for protecting draught animals from the fierce rays of the sun catches on.

As an experiment the S.P.C.A. has obtained a dozen straw bonnets from England. These have been distributed among some of the cab-owners in Cape Town.

The straw bonnets are shaped like ordinary bonnets, but there are two apertures for the animal's ears. They fasten easily underneath the neck.

"There is no doubt that these bonnets afford the animal some comfort by protecting them from the intense heat of the sun," declared Major G. M. Upton, secretary of the S.P.C.A. "We are distributing them among some of the cab-owners."

to protect those horses which stand in the sun the whole day.

"We hope that the idea will spread, and that all cab-owners and drivers of other vehicles, such as ice-cream carts, will go in for these bonnets."

Major Upton pointed out that this was not the first time that this device was being tried in Cape Town. The earlier bonnets were of a different type, however. The bonnets were being used in many parts of the world at present.—Reuter.

NOSE CUT BY TIMING THREAD IN CARRacing Driver's Mishap*RAZOR SLASH EFFECT

Southport. While Mr. L. P. Driscoll, the racing driver, was travelling at more than 100 miles per hour on the sands here recently, a timing thread, caught up by his motor-car, was whisked across his face, slashing his nose like a razor.

Mr. Driscoll, who is to make an attempt to beat the world's baby car record of 128 miles an hour, was not aware that threads attached to the electrical timing apparatus had been stretched across the course to time a bigger car. They were too high for the bonnet of his miniature racer to snap them.

During the morning Mr. Jack Field took out the Silver Bullet in the hope of beating the existing record for the sands of 156 miles an hour and also of making an attack on the British Empire land speed record of 217 miles an hour, but luck was against him.

Badly Shaken Recent high tides had so roughened the course that the great car leapt and bounced in an alarming manner and prevented Mr. Field from opening the throttle fully.

When he returned after his first run, on which he achieved only 147 miles an hour, Mr. Field was very badly shaken, and it was found that the body-work of the car had started to sheer away from the bolts holding it in position.

Mr. Field made another attempt, but was unable to better his speed, and the car was towed back to Birkdale for repairs.

Madrid. Madrid restaurant proprietors who do not supply free red or white wine with every meal costing less than 5/- are to be fined. Special "Fraud Service" inspectors are to be detailed to see that this new regulation is strictly observed.—Reuter.

Broadcasting In Britain

In refusing any premature inquiry into the charter of the British Broadcasting Corporation Sir Kingsley Wood acts in the public interest. That charter has still three years to run. It is true that the Postmaster-General can, if he chooses, promote an earlier investigation, but some better reason for setting up elaborate and costly machinery is required than the kind of harassment to which broadcasting has lately been subjected. That there should be criticism is a sign of public interest, and the last people to resent it will be those responsible for the wireless programmes in Britain. Nor will there be desire to avoid an authoritative examination into the manner in which the character has been used when the due time comes. A speech to the Conservative members recently Sir John Reith dealt with the main points of those who are genuinely seeking for information regarding the working of the institution he has built up. His case is not likely to be weakened by effluxion of time. No body providing a service on the scale of that of the B. B. C. could hope to be free from continual sniping. Wireless has to appeal to every variety of taste, and tastes in entertainment are almost as multitudinous as the number of listeners. Taken as a whole, objections to the programmes cancel one another out; what is anathema to one listener is the delight of another, and, since various programmes are available throughout the day, both dislikes and preferences can ordinarily be satisfied by an adjustment of wave-length. Whatever is said in disparagement of the programmes, they are the best available on any transmission in the world, and the rapidity with which the number of licences increases affords striking evidence of appreciation. The revenue of the B. B. C. depends on the effectiveness of its response to public demand, and tested by that criterion the attacks can be regarded with equanimity. Conditions of employment within the B. B. C. are the concern of the staff, but if there were truth in the allegations of harshness and autocracy discontent would manifest itself where, in fact, there is both devotion and enthusiasm. There remains the censorship. To hold the scales impartially as regards the expression of opinion is the most difficult of all tasks. When the allegations that there is too much censorship are set against the equally strong affirmations that there is too little, the conclusion must be that the balance has been held fairly even. No wireless service in the world enjoys such freedom in the expression of diverse views. On all points about which the B. B. C. is assailed, what the critics must ask themselves is, what kind of control could be substituted for that of the present management? To make broadcasting avowedly an instrument of Government, as it is in some countries, would be repugnant to the whole national sense. Nor would a system such as that in the United States, by which broadcasting is exploited by great advertising firms, be any more congenial to the British temperament. The only good alternative is the system under which the B. B. C. works, which gives the listeners themselves a large measure of indirect control.

Dustless Outer Space.

Far out in space are nebulae darting away at the prodigious speed of 12,000 to 15,000 miles a second. Their light is redder than that of similar and nearer masses. Here relativists see direct evidence of an exploding universe. Like a locomotive whistle dashing from the hearer, these distant nebulae are "howling" down. We see the "howling" as a reddening. From this it is concluded that far-away super-galaxies are disappearing like wisps of smoke in a breeze. But sceptics point out that the observations are made on the earth, that they are not directly measured but merely deduced from the reddening of light. "An effect of dust in the atmosphere" explains the physicist. As they struggle through even the thinnest haze the solar rays are "shifted to red" in spectroscopic parlance. What if the light of the distant nebulae had to travel through a film of gas and cosmic dust? A mere pinch, as it were, would be enough to account for the reddening and hence for illusory velocities. Professor Harlow Shapley of Harvard disposed of this scepticism. With the aid of infra-red or heat rays he sampled space for dust. He found it within a distance of ten million light-years, but not in the outer regions. It looks as if the remote nebulae are indeed rushing away at more than explosive speeds. There still remains the theory that rays on a journey lasting fifty and even 150 million light-years lose some of their energy—grow weary. The redness of the nebulae testifies to that fatigue. Similarly, it is explained that the rays of the sun are "softer" or less energetic after they have fought their way out of a fiercely incandescent interior through dense layers of gas. In the case of the nebulae the loss of energy would theoretically manifest itself in a red shift. Moreover, the red shift should be proportional to the distance, which is exactly what the astrophysicists have observed. "Light is a queer thing—queerer than we thought," said Einstein. "It is as queer as that," is Edington's comment.

HERE, THERE, EVERYWHERE

$5000 A Year Tastes

Revelations of the association between Stavisky and Jean Galmot, the former French Deputy who died in mysterious circumstances in Cayenne in 1928, will revive interest in Blaise Cendrars's "Rhum."

"Rhum", the story of Galmot's life, came out about three years ago. Galmot, born in the Dordogne in 1879, was a man of energy and ambition. He was the son of a schoolmaster, and began as a journalist on the "Petit Nicolas." He wrote novels and feuilletons. Even in those days he had $5,000-a-year tastes on a $500 income.

An American Marriage

When he was 26 he married Miss Heydecker, the daughter of a wealthy American Consul in Russia, with business interests in many countries, including French Guiana. Heydecker objected to Galmot's extravagance, but paid his debts on condition that he went to Guiana.

There Galmot worked 16 hours a day and became the rum and business king of the colony. The natives worshipped him. When he died they assumed that he had been poisoned and raised a revolution.

Even when he was making millions, Galmot retained his literary urge. To the end of his life he used to rise at 4 a.m. to write his novels. But he was better at business than writing.

Fiction Respectable Again

The attitude of the B.B.C. towards the modern novelist is softening. That gifted but disreputable creature has in recent months been rigidly excluded from the weekly broadcast reviews of new books.

Now he is to be reinstated. Novels may once more be reviewed over the air.

It is doubtful whether the lifting of this ban indicates any slackening in the more than maternal solicitude of the B.B.C. for the morals of its listeners.

It may be due to several causes, among them the presence of a woman novelist on the Board of Governors and the increasing difficulty of distinguishing between a modern novel and a modern biography or travel-book.

BLACKSHIRT LEADER REPLIES

"CRITICS IN FRENZY OF FEAR"

HYSTERIA A TRIBUTE TO PROGRESS

(By Sir Oswald Mosley.)

Recent powerful support of the Blackshirts has produced the results to be expected.

On the one hand, we experienced a great acceleration in the recruiting of members and a large extension of our appeal and organisation. On the other hand, the Old Gangs of Politics were moved to a frenzy of fear and fury by the alarming rapidity of the Black-shirt advance.

Mr. Baldwin led the attack on the platform and on the wireless in the safe shelter of the B.B.C.—that tame monopoly of Old Gang rule which denies Blackshirts the right of reply. Half a dozen Cabinet Ministers and innumerable lesser fry of the Ministerial ranks followed with platform and Parliamentary attacks. Even Sir John Simon interrupted his record sequence of failure at the Foreign Office to instruct us in the very domestic issue of the shirts we wear.

The Secretary of the T.U.C. and other Socialist leaders appealed with a moving pathos for protection from the Blackshirts to the "Capitalist" Government which they spend their lives in denouncing. For once they showed themselves of like mind with their followers who come to break up Blackshirt meetings and when they are ejected howl for protection by the police, who are normally the objects of their venomous attacks.

Socialist and Tory Peers in a full-dress debate in the House of Lords combined to demand action against Blackshirts with grossly untrue allegations, at least one of which would not have been made with impunity outside the legal shelter of that archaic assembly.

The opposing Press oscillated between hysterical demands for our suppression as a public menace and the publication of absurdly faked figures of our membership, which were designed to show that we were so negligible as to be unworthy of their notice.

In a rare flurry and confusion of mind and of purpose the Old Gang Parties laid aside for the moment the sham battle of Westminster to present a united front against the only real challenge to their betrayal of the nation. In another country the combination of the Old Parties against Fascism was called the "Iron Front." In this country the Blackshirts have learnt to describe more appropriately that inevitable combination as the "Jelly Front."

Confusion Of Thought

These old gentlemen in the excitement of their partisanship have fallen into a remarkable confusion of thought which it is interesting to analyse.

In the first place, if the allegations made against the British Union of Fascists were true we should be liable to prosecution with heavy penalties under the existing law. The raising of a "private army" and the drilling of such a force is expressly prohibited, with severe penalties, under the Unlawful Drilling Act, 1919. In actual fact, the charges levelled against us are entirely untrue, and, consequently, we cannot be prosecuted under the existing and effective law.

If the allegations of our opponents were true we could be prosecuted without any necessity for the Government to seek from Parliament fresh powers for this purpose.

Stripped of these direct falsehoods, the case against the British Union of Fascists is that our members voluntarily adopt in our organisation an authoritarian principle and wear a shirt of a particular colour. On the first point, we merely apply to politics the procedure which is customary in every business in the country. My position and my authority is broadly equivalent to that of a managing director in a business. Our members accept my authority and that of other officers of the Union in precisely the same manner that members of a business organisation accept responsible authority. The only difference is that our members volunteer to serve the organisation and pay a subscription to it, while members of a business organisation receive payment for their services. The authoritarian principle in both cases is precisely the same, and I have yet to learn that it infringes either the law or the Constitution.

If the Government decided to proceed impartially against all voluntary organisations adopting the authoritarian principle they would find in this country a wide scope for their intervention. Similar considerations govern the wearing of a shirt of a particular colour. Our object is to remove barriers of class by removing differences in dress. The Black-shirt, further, is the outward symbol of a faith which is held with a religious fervour. Our dress is certainly not so military as that of the Salvation Army.

But it is suggested that this instruction to Englishmen in the clothing they may wear shall apply only to political movements. So the vestments of the Church, the uniform of the Boy Scout, club ties, and other corporate symbols may presumably continue to enjoin our former freedom.

The Dress Question

Now the Old Parties do not wear distinctive dress; Fascism alone is affected by these proposals. So it is significant that these attacks coincide with the emergence of the British Union of Fascists as a serious challenger for Power. We have pursued the same practice for the last 18 months without let or hindrance. Only when we begin to organise every constituency to capture a Parliamentary majority by legal and constitutional means does the demand arise that our organisation should be penalised by special legislation.

At the very moment that the development of our organisation should remove the last doubt as to the legal and constitutional nature of our intentions, the demand is advanced for the first time that special action should be taken against us. The moral is very plain; our opponents are exercised not by our shirts but by our success.

The flimsy plea of disorder arising from the wearing of a Black-shirt will not stand. The Home Secretary in the House of Commons states that in the last six months of last year 22 cases of disorder arose at our meetings in the Metropolitan area, as opposed to 11 cases in the preceding six months. The explanation is very simple, for in the latter period our number of meetings held was more than double those held in the preceding period.

ECCLESIASTICAL TRIALS

Proposal For Secret Courts Rejected.

TIED VOTE ON MEASURE

London. The Church Assembly at Westminster has rejected by one tied vote a measure proposing to restrict newspaper reports of Ecclesiastical Court cases of clergymen accused of immoral conduct.

The approval of all three Houses (Bishops, Clergy and Laity) was required to carry the proposal. This was prevented by a tie in the House of Bishops.

A vote by Houses resulted:
House For Against
Bishops 12 12
Clergy 148 60
Laity 122 65
Canon A. C. Deane, Proctor of the Dean of Windsor, emphasised that the proposed measure would not set up secret courts.

Lord Hugh Cecil, opposing the measure, recalled the case of Archbishop Wakefield and suggested that the "great body of sympathisers" would have been indignant "that without the security of publicity such a man should be condemned."—Reuter.

POPCORN DISPUTE ENDED

President Roosevelt Defends Vendor.

WHITE HOUSE GESTURE

Washington.

Following in the footsteps of Woodrow Wilson, President Roosevelt has intervened in the case of "Nick, the Greek," a popcorn and peanut vendor who operates a portable stall near the White House lawn. Not for the first time, the Chamber of Commerce authorities here descended on Nick with threats of expulsion.

They reckoned in the first place without Mrs. Roosevelt, a frequent purchaser of Nick's popcorn, who, having read about his troubles, sent a note to one of the White House secretaries saying: "Must this man go?" and in the second place without the President himself, who had already dispatched to the police authorities a Presidential edict securing Nick from molestation.

Nick is now as well satisfied with the efforts of President and Mrs. Roosevelt to protect him as he was years ago when President Wilson came to his assistance. The White House squirrels are happy too for 30 years they and their furry ancestors have stored and munched Nick's delicacies, thrown to them by White House visitors and sightseers.—Reuter.

"It is pretty well known now what Germany demands, and it would therefore be a case of 'discovering what the conference, without Germany, could agree to. After that, it would not take long to find out what Germany had to say about the result.

"But in particular, it has still to be discovered whether the conditions of security whereon the French would consent to reduce or limit their armaments—to limit, say, for seven years and to reduce during the next five—are such as this country can possibly consider," the journal declares.

Viscount Cecil, in an interview published in the London News Chronicle, suggests that Britain should agree to France's request for the summoning of the General Commission. Unfortunately, the Germans would not be there, but every opportunity should be taken of informing them of the discussions.

The Executive Committee of the League of Nations Union in London also urges the Government to ask for an immediate meeting of the Commission, and to then present a definite scheme based on the general abolition of weapons now forbidden to Germany, together with equally definite proposals for a collective economic guarantee of observance of the Disarmament treaty as well as the re-affirmation of all existing international obligations for the preservation of peace.

In other quarters, it is assumed, that the next step will be a meeting of the Bureau, as arranged, to proceed with the task, delegated to it by the General Commission, of preparing a new copy of the original British draft convention, inserting additional points upon which a general agreement has been reached.—British Wireless Service.

Political Changes In New York.

New York, To-day.

Mr. John Curry, head of Tammany Hall since 1929, has been overthrown by a revolt within the organisation.

Mr. Curry's successor has not yet been chosen.—Reuter.

To-day's Short Story.

QUERY

By Seamark.

THOMAS MASTERICK looked dully at the little square of grey sky behind his cell window. He had come to regard it as something of an entity, something almost possessing life. It had a unique talent. It was the only thing in his cell that ever changed. It was a tiny, slow-moving picture in a world that was fixed and motionless. He talked to it in a low, uncomplaining monotone that was cowl-like in its contemplative absence of expression. For fifteen years he had been talking to various objects in his cell, reasoning with them vaguely on his one cowering grievance against life.

Not that it was a grievance in the ordinary sense of the word, for there was not a scrap of resentment in the soul of Thomas Masterick. Only a dim perplexity, a puzzlement that refused to submit to elucidation no matter how earnestly he tried to think it out. All he asked of life was an explanation, a reason for the rather unfair thing life had done to him. And he could never quite get down to that explanation. It eluded him persistently. A thousand times he had tried to think down to the real reason. And he had overdone it. Later he came to realise that that was probably why he could no longer think as easily as he used to.

"The trouble is," he admitted to the grey square, "I've been thinking too much. I've had too many thoughts. A lot too many thoughts. I know I have; because now when I try to have a real good think all I get is a bad dizzy. And these dizzies make my head ache. I've been having too many of them—dizzies lately.

"But they can say what they like," he added moodily. "They can say what they like, but they can't say I killed Fred Smith. They can say and say. But that 'don't make out I killed him.'"

He sat on the edge of his stool and fretfully fingered the leaves of the Bible on the white-scrubbed table.

"Of course the other trouble is," he said, "they think I did. And that's where they've got me. That's what makes it more awkward. It's not much use me saying I didn't, if all the time they tell me I did. They don't believe me any more than I believe them. They're the most awful crowd of liars I ever met.

TUBERCULOSIS IN CHILDREN

Instructive Lecture By Dr. T. M. Tso.

A very instructive lecture, entitled "Pulmonary Tuberculosis in Children" and its Prevention" by Dr. T. M. Tso, M.D., CH. B. (Edin.) D.M.R.E. (Liv.) was delivered last night at the Chinese Y.M.C.A. In Kowloon before a big gathering of Chinese.

Dr. Tso said that the public, while recognizing the importance of T. B. in adults, is still quite unaware of its importance in children, due to wrong impression that T. B. does not exist in children under 16 years of age. Medical researches have proved that by the 15th year 90% of the children have been infected with tuberculosis germs.

There are eight causes of consumption: (1) Caused by a very minute germ called tubercle bacillus. (2) Lack of fresh air (3) Lack of sun light (4) Improper housing especially overcrowded (5) Impure and improper food (6) Lack of exercise (7) Other diseases which weaken the body especially measles and whooping cough (8) Come in contact with T. B. person.

In order to raise the resistance, parents should pay attention to the following points: (1) Give plenty of fresh air. Several rules should be noted: (a) Keep window open all the time, especially at night (b) children should not sleep with adults (c) Do not allow children sleep with bed-clothes covering the head (d) Let children spend at least one hour in the open air (2) Proper housing and suitable home surround (3) nourishment (4) Exercise (5) Avoid weakening diseases.

In conclusion, he stressed on the importance of avoiding infections during the first and second year of life at all cost.

"That long, lanky chap in the black gown—he was the worst of the lot. And he was the start of it. Never heard such a lying devil in all my life. Stood up in the middle of the court he did—in the middle of the court, mind you—and deliberately argued that I killed Fred Smith. And there was a hell of a crowd of people there. All listening. They must have heard it. Couldn't have done otherwise.

"And how could he know?" he asked with placid wonderment. "Eh? How could he know. He wasn't there. He admitted he'd never seen me, not till that day they put me in court. So how could he know. Yet he stood in the very middle of that court and deliberately made out to the judge how I did it. Stuck at it for four days he did. He was a marvel of a chap. He proved I did it! Actually proved it. He was a marvel of a chap. Proved it as plain as plain. An absolute marvel of a chap. But the most God-forsaken liar I ever came across in my life.

MONDAY'S STORY

Monday's story will be "Memory," by Howard Bach.

"And the questions he asked. Cough! You'd have thought he'd known Smithy all his life. Long, lanky devil, he had me tied up all ways. Couldn't move a hand's turn. A fair knockout. He proved me a liar. And a perjurer. And a thief. And then he went and proved I killed Fred Smith. And that was where I had him. Because I never killed Fred Smith. I never saw Fred Smith that day. And if ever I get out of this I'll tell him so, too. Never such a chap in all my born days. Simply wouldn't listen to reason. And now it's raining like the very devil.

"I never told him any lies. I never told him any perjury. And I never nicked anything in my life. Well, not since I left school, anyway. And then for him to stand up in the middle of that court and say the things he did—well! It beats me. Beats me flat.

"And then the judge told me he was going to hang me. I wouldn't have been stuck here all this time. Can't make out why he didn't. They was so damn cock-sure I'd done it. If I did, why didn't he hang me? If I'd done it, he ought to have hung me, and none of these half-larks. If I didn't do it, then they got no right to have me hung. And they haven't hung me. Looks precious much to me as if they ain't sure I did do it, after all.

"I knew it was going to rain. I knew it this morning. And I said so to Four-eighty-four out in the exercise. 'Ginger,' I said, 'it's going to rain.' 'I don't care a damn,' says Ginger. 'Before dinner,' I said. 'Will it,' says Ginger. 'I'll bet you three hundred thousand pounds it don't.'

"Well, I've got that to come, anyway. That ought to set me up a bit when I get outside. But I don't suppose I'll get it. He won't pay up. He never does. I don't believe he's got three hundred thousand pounds. He's a fly devil in Ginger. Different as anything from Southampton Jack betted me a bread ration that I couldn't get him the result of the Derby before supper-time. Of course I could get him the result of the Derby before supper-time. I know the ropes. After all the years I've been here I ought to know the ropes. People who don't know how to get hold of the ropes never ought to go to prison.

"But Ginger don't even pay up on a bread ration. He betted me a bread ration last Sunday that the chaplain would give out hymn number four-eighty-four in the evening. And he didn't. The biggest number he gave out was three hundred and eight. But that only shows how much Ginger knows about religion. Hymn number four-eighty-four is a Christmas hymn. And this ain't Christmas. Not by a long chalk. But he never paid up.

"Southampton Jack paid up next morning. Chucked it in my cell as he was passin' through to the exercise. That's the best of sailors. They're only fly devils sometimes. Mostly they're all right. He's here because he sold a lot of cargo. He says he'd go dotty if they put him (Continued on page 12.)

Economical Use of Eggs

RIPE OLIVES ACCOMPLISH RICH TOUCH

Distinctive When Served Hot.

GRAVY CAN BE ADDED

The hostess who has the reputation of serving unusual dishes that are popular with all is in an enviable but attainable position. The very important secret is knowing when to add a delicacy to the prosaic dish. Have you ever considered how often just this can be accomplished with a few ripe olives?

They can be added to potato salad, giving it a smart appearance, a piquant flavour and a distinctive touch that raises it above the ordinary.

The next time you make a meat gravy add a few pitted and chopped ripe olives and you will be delighted with the zest and richness of the flavour.

Ripe olives served hot are a distinct and most pleasing novelty. Remove the label from the can, place can, unopened, in water and bring to the boiling point. Immediately remove from the boiling hot water and open the can. Drain off the liquor and serve these hot ripe olives in a warm dish. The heating brings out the rich nutty flavour of the fruit.

Ripe olives have been proven, by government tests, to be rich in vitamin A content as well as having an alkaline reaction. These factors make them exceptionally nourishing as well as an attractive and tasty addition to your menu.

THE RIGHT WAY TO MAKE COFFEE

This Method Brings Out The Best Flavour.

Coffee should be bought whole, in the beans, ground at home in a small machine. It should be bought a quarter of a pound at a time so that it will be freshly roasted.

If you have no pet coffee machine use an ordinary jug. Be generous with the coffee—there's not a machine in the world that will make good coffee if you are not—three heaped tablespoonfuls of coffee to a quart jug.

Pour the water on without taking it off the boil. Let it stand for five minutes, adding first a small pinch of salt, an equally small pinch of mustard.

Then beat with a spoon. Don't stir, beat.

Strain, and your coffee will be made as it should be, and as it was intended to be made.

Coffee is not a new drink. The Abyssinians used it from the very earliest times. It kept Mohammedans awake through long religious services.

It was, therefore, declared to be an intoxicant, and forbidden by the Koran.

The first coffee house in London was opened in 1652 by the servant of a Mr. Edwards. He had brought this servant from Smyrna.

He prepared coffee daily, and Mr. Edwards found that he was over-whelmed with guests. He suggested that his servant should open a coffee shop, which soon did a roaring trade.

BUTTERMILK DUMPLING

Eight ounces of flour, 5oz. chopped suet, 3oz. sugar, 3oz. sultanas or raisins, 2oz. currants, half a small teaspoonful salt, one small teaspoonful sweet spice, one small teaspoonful of carbonate of soda. Sufficient buttermilk to make a stiff dough.

Add soda, sugar, and spice to flour, then other ingredients. Beat together and put in a buttered pudding basin. Steam for three hours. Serve with sweet sauce if desired.

Valuable Hints For The Housewife.

FOOD VALUE HIGH

Eggs are such a versatile food they deserve special advantage in almost any course in a meal and their cheapness this season invites the economical housewife to make use of them frequently.

The food value of eggs is especially noteworthy. They are a rich source of vitamin A, and the D vitamin which is found principally in fish oils is present in the egg yolk in considerable amount. Vitamins B and G also are found in eggs, so you see that all the vitamins except C and E are supplied by this always available food.

As a source of mineral eggs hold an important place. Although poor in calcium they are rich in iron and phosphorus, two minerals necessary for good nutrition.

When it comes to calories, one medium sized egg, weighing about two and one-half ounces in the shell supplies 25 calories of protein and 45 of fat, making a total of 70 calories.

Although eggs do contain most of the food elements needed by the body for its development, nevertheless they must be properly combined with other foods. Lack of carbohydrates and coarse fiber puts them in the list of foods that tend to produce acidity. Leafy vegetables, fruits and cereals with milk and eggs supply a diet almost perfect in balance of energy-value, vitamin content and ash constituents.

Egg canapes make a splendid first course.

Egg Canape.

Two hard cooked eggs, 4 boneless sandinies, 1 teaspoon lemon juice 1-8 teaspoon mustard, salt and paprika, watercress, 8 small rounds of toast, pearl onions.

Cut eggs in halves crosswise. Remove yolks and mash with a fork. Add sandinies mashed to a paste and season with salt paprika, lemon juice and mustard. Reheat whites and place in ice-box to chill. When ready to serve cut in 8 slices and put each slice on a round of toast covered with minced watercress. Drop two or three pearl onions on each canape and serve.

Pate de fois gras, deviled ham, anchovy paste or a good bloater paste can be substituted for sandinies.

DINNER BURDEN OVERCOME.

Cooking Made Easy With Casserole.

Oh, these casserole dinners, what a boon they are to harried housewives, as well as women who like to enjoy the calm of additional leisure.

Try quickly searing a nice cut of the top of the round—perhaps you will want to have the butcher pound it a bit, and then you'll pound in a bit of flour and seasoning before placing it in a pan—before arranging it in a baking dish. Now mind, this piece of steak is least an inch and a half thick—silvers just won't do. Add half the contents of a can of mushroom soup, several small picked onions and peeled potatoes, allowing one for each member of the family to be served. Brush the potatoes, with melted butter and season well.

Cover the dish, slip into a moderate oven, about 375 degrees, and bake for an hour. Remove the cover the last 10 minutes if you want the potatoes to be slightly browned.

FOR LEFTOVER CHICKEN

If you haven't quite enough chicken to serve the day following the chicken's first appearance it can be creamed, served on toast, with rice, or macaroni added and your meal will be good, economical and yet sufficient.

CHOPPED EGG AND SWEET PEPPER GARNISH

One large tomato, 3 tablespoonfuls of diced chicken and celery salad, 1 large head of cauliflower (quartered), 2 whole beets, 6 fresh asparagus tips, lettuce, sweet pepper and chopped egg for garnish.

On a platter lined with lettuce, place a peeled fresh tomato stuffed with diced chicken and celery mixed with a teaspoon of mayonnaise.

At each end put a bundle of three fresh asparagus tips covered with a ring of sweet green pepper. Around the tomato place a fan of sliced beets topped with the quartered cauliflower bouquet. This recipe serves two people adequately.

New Method To Prepare Beets

Baked With Lemon Juice And Sour Cream.

Beets rarely appear on the average table in any form save boiled with butter or incorporated into a sour salad. Both methods of serving are excellent, but here is a decidedly different way of preparing this wholesome and colourful vegetable.

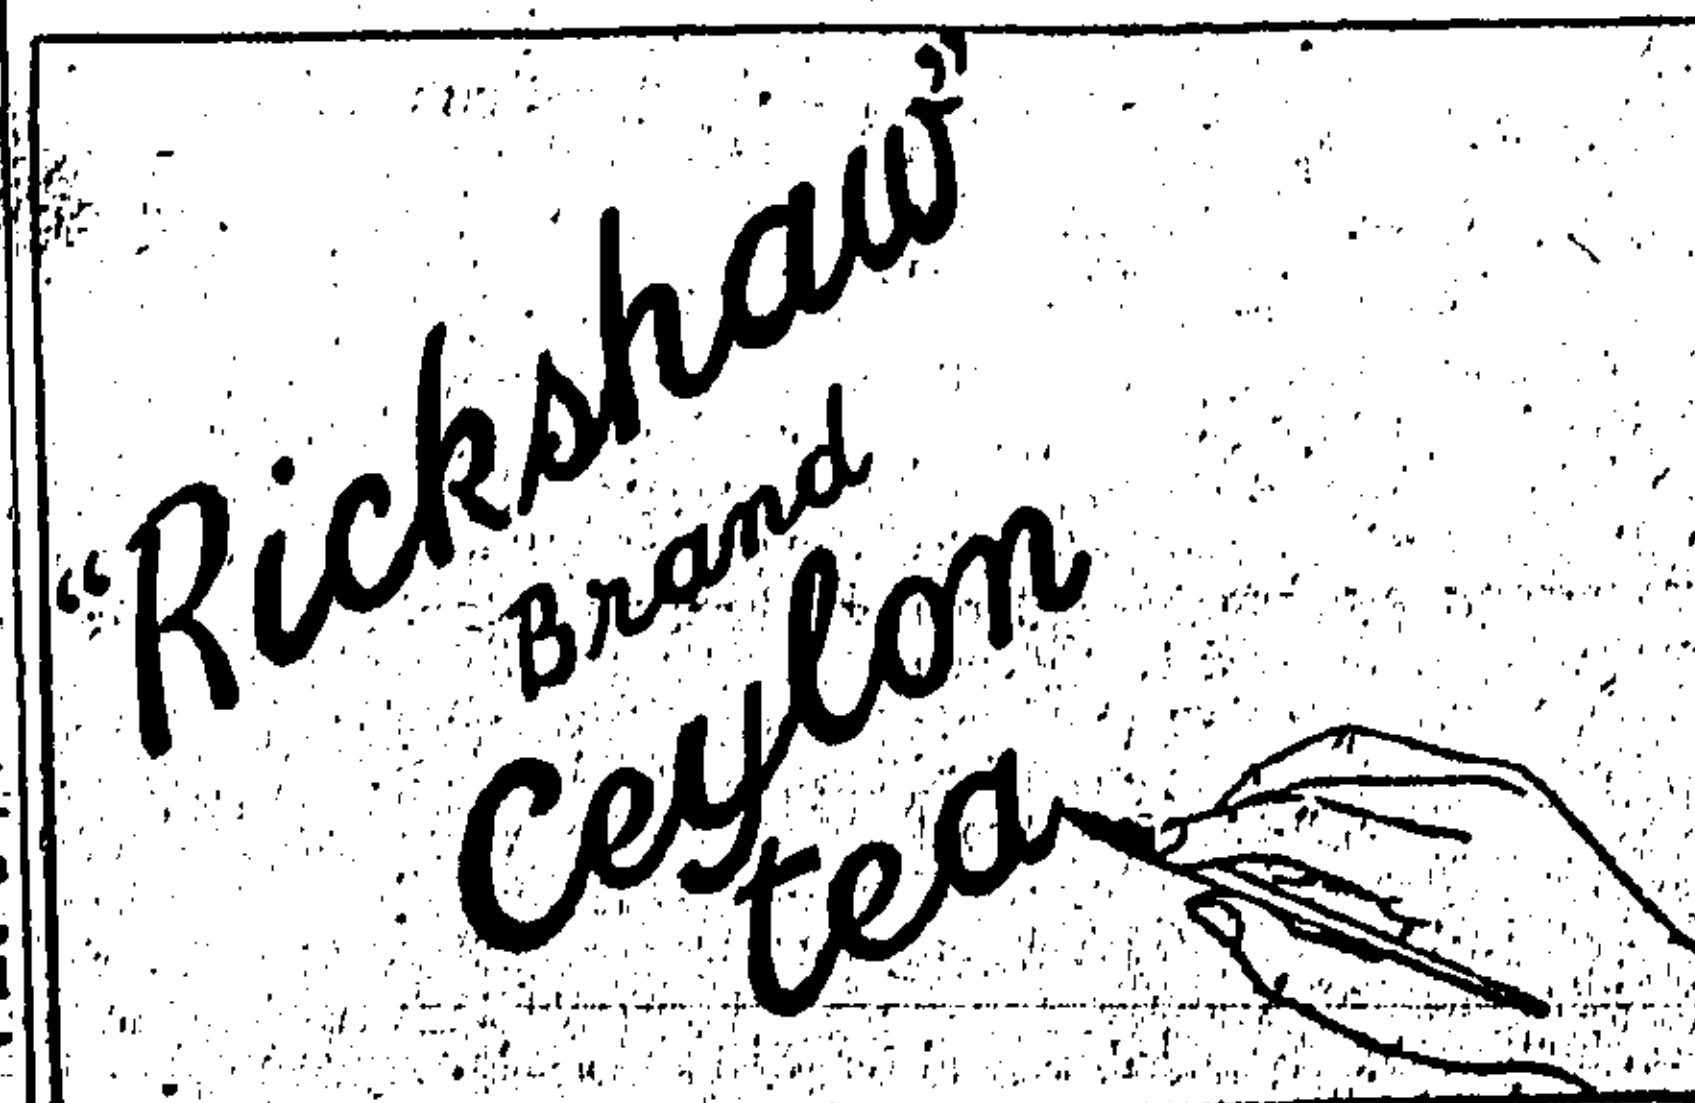

Boil or steam a sufficient number of beets to make three cups of beets after cooking and skin removal. Season the beets with salt and pepper, a tablespoon of lemon juice and a cup of thick sour cream. Add half a green pepper, chopped, and pepper to taste. Rub a baking dish with a garlic clove before greasing (the garlic, of course, is optional), then turn the beet mixture into dish, cover with butter bread crumbs and place in the oven to brown. It is best to prepare this dish while the beets are still hot, otherwise they will have to remain in the oven until thoroughly heated.

Rolled Oats Bread For Breakfast.

2 cups boiling water
2 cups rolled oats
4 tablespoonfuls brown sugar or molasses
4 teaspoons salt
3 tablespoons melted shortening
1 yeast cake dissolved in ¼ cup of lukewarm water
Enough flour to make a dough
Add rolled oats to boiling water, also sugar, salt and melted shortening. When lukewarm add dissolved yeast and flour. Knead until dough is smooth and elastic. Put in a well-greased bowl, cover and set in a warm place until light. Then knead form into two loaves, place in greased bread pans and allow to become light again. Bake about 45 minutes in hot oven.

Corn Syrup Prevents Graining Of Frosting.

There's nothing more annoying than a frosting that insists on graining. This condition is brought about by the formation of grainy crystals of sugar. You may avoid such a mishap by adding one tablespoon of corn syrup to each cup of sugar required in the recipe. What's more, the frosting will keep much better as a result of the addition of corn syrup.

NANCY CARROLL'S TRIPE DISH.

Film Star's Recipe.

Nancy Carroll's favourite dish is trip a la mode. Her recipe is: Cut the trip into two-inch squares. Cover bottom of baking dish with thin strips of larding pork, then put in a layer of tripe. Season well with salt, pepper, a crumbled bay leaf, a clove, and a chopped garlic. Then cover with sliced onions, carrots, leeks, and a little parsley. After that put in the rest of the tripe; season and cover with vegetables. Put in enough water to come almost to the top, cover the dish and cook slowly all day.

Leftover Tomatoes As Hot Vegetable.

If you have tomatoes left over why not treat them as a hot vegetable? For example, stuff them with some left-over stewed corn and then bake.

It's a good dish, an another results from baking tomatoes that have been filled with a raw egg and sprinkled with cheese.

Keep Quick Breads Fresh In This manner.

Quick breads, such as nut and fruit bread and muffins, can be kept pleasantly fresh for several days if they are stored in cellophane bags. Paste the flaps down on the bags to prevent the air from entering.

spoon lemon juice, sugar to taste. Melt butter in saucepan, cut kidney into small pieces, removing all fat. Mix flour, pepper, and salt together on a plate and roll each piece of kidney in it. Put the pieces of kidney into the pan and stir until they are a golden brown. Pour in the stock and allow to simmer for 2 hours. Stir frequently and remove skum. Place carrot, turnip, onion, salt, pepper sugar, fresh tomatoes, and lemon juice, and boil until tender in another saucepan. Rub through a wire sieve and add to the kidney mixture. Stir until boiling and serve.

Chicken and Tongue Patties.

Puff pastry, minced chicken and tongue, salt and pepper, a little stock or gravy. Make the pastry and roll out to the thickness of quarter of an inch. Stamp into rounds, and line some patty tins. Put a spoonful of the minced meat (cooked), seasoned, and moistened with the stock or gravy, into each. Cover with a lid of pastry, and bake in a quick oven. Serve these hot or cold.

Beef Pot Roast.

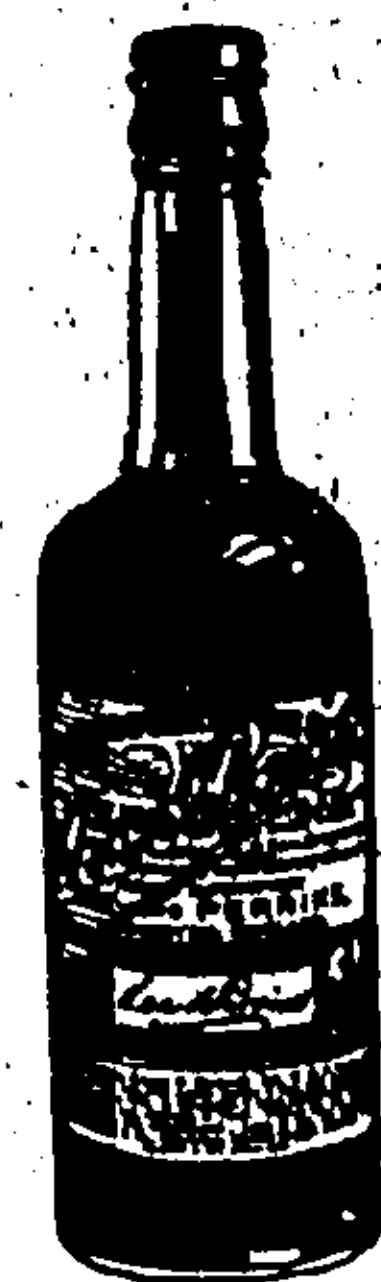

3 lb. rump steak, 2 cloves, flour, boiling stock, dripping, salt and pepper, 1 bayleaf, Worcester sauce. Take the rump steak, wipe it, and dust over with flour. Melt a large piece of dripping in a saucepan, when hot put in the meat and brown on all sides. Add a break-fastcupful of boiling stock also bayleaf and cloves. Over the pan closely, and cook slowly for about 2½ to 3 hours, adding a little stock as required to prevent burning. Season with salt and pepper. Place meat on a hot pan, thicken gravy with a little flour, a tablespoon Worcester sauce, and pour round the meat.

Cocoon Mould.

2 tablespoonfuls cocoa, 1 pint milk, 1 oz. gelatine, ½ teacupful cold water, 3 oz. coconut sugar to taste. Soak the gelatine in the cold water and dissolve the cocoa in a little cold milk. Bring the rest of the milk to boil and stir in the cocoa mixture. Add sugar to taste, then gradually pour the mixture into the gelatine, stirring all the time. When slightly cooled, add the coconut, and pour into a mould to set.

France's Bid For Air Supremacy

Paris.—There are several reasons why this French aerial dreadnaught is the most formidable fighting plane in the world. It can carry seven tons of bombs and has a top speed of 188 miles an hour. It can take it on a round-trip flight to Berlin, London or Rome with consummate ease. The 16-ton, four-engined, all steel monoplane is a veritable "flying fort." A battery of six machine guns mounted at carefully selected positions along its 82-foot fuselage, made it devoid of "blind spots." An attacker would get a hot fire from whichever direction it approached.

NEW VAULT FOR U.S. GOLD.

Impregnable Structure In Washington.

Washington.
Just to be on the safe side, the Treasury is building a new vault, said to be impregnable, in which to keep the additional few billion dollars worth of gold which it has acquired by President Roosevelt's order.
The vault will be completed this coming summer.
The Treasury has never been broken into. Its guards have an arsenal of their own, and an alarm system whereby all doors can be locked at once.—Reuter.

Is it suggested that we break up our own meetings? If not, the onus of disorder rests on our opponents. No single case has ever been proved against us in which Blackshirts have broken up the meetings of our opponents. In point of fact, the cases of disorder have decreased since the wearing of the Black shirt and the organization of efficient stewards.

Orderly Meetings

Far fewer cases of disorder have occurred at meetings of the British Union of Fascists than at meetings of the New Party, which was one of the components of the former body. In the days when we wore no distinctive shirts it was practically impossible to obtain a decent hearing for our speakers in "Red" areas, and the police had constantly to intervene. Not only meetings addressed by me and other male speakers were broken up, but also meetings addressed by women.

During the whole period of the meetings that I have addressed this winter with Blackshirts present in force, no meeting has been broken up, nor has any serious disorder occurred. In only three cases have disorderly elements even been ejected. On the Home Secretary's own figures of disorder at meetings in the Metropolitan area, disorder has occurred at less than 1 per cent. of the meetings we have held, as we now hold an average of 100 meetings per week in that area, and some 1,000 meetings per week throughout the country.

It must be remembered that we daily hold open-air meetings in areas where other parties dare not hold meetings at all owing to "Red" terrorism. Free speech for all effective purposes has long ceased to exist in large regions of the country. Political leaders nearly always hold carefully ticketed meetings of their own supporters, and address orderly audiences of the already converted.

The Prime Minister's meeting at Leeds; Mr. Duff Cooper's meeting at Fulham; and Lord Beaverbrook's meeting at Camberwell are a foretaste of what will occur if they adopt the practice of open meetings. On the contrary, all our meetings are thrown open to the general public and we exercise our right of maintaining order at such meetings.

The Blackshirts, who have re-established the right of free speech in Britain in face of the razor, knife, and bludgeon, deserve something better of their country than this unscrupulous campaign of misrepresentation, which is as malicious in spirit as it is muddled in thought.

Until our enemies clear their heads and steady their nerves, we need only notice in this hysteria a tribute to the strength of the Blackshirt advance.

??? QUERY ???

scratched 'em all up in the white-wash. All in bundles of ten. And I scratched one out at each breakfast. Five thousand four hundred and eighty days. That's what they give you for a life. And I had 'em all written up.

"The first time I lost count was years and years ago. While we were out in the exercise the maintenance party came round and put fresh whitewash up in the cells. And when I tried to think down to how many I'd done and how many I still had to do, I got a dizzy. And then, just when I had it nearly all put to rights again by licking off a lot of the new whitewash, they went and changed my cell and made me an Ember Day."

When the chaplain came he found Masterick very quiet and subdued. "How are you, Number Three-fifty-four?" he asked with kindly anxiety. "Well, I hope!—and prepared for your big adventure to-morrow. I really and sincerely trust we shall never see you again."

Masterick turned his eyes to the window-patch. "Well, sir, that all depends on how they look at it," he said, a little distantly. "I never quite know what they're going to do with me next. You never ought to have seen me to start with. Not really. Because I never killed Fred Smith. But you know that, don't you? I told you."

"Yes; but I want to know what you are going to do. I can probably help you with your arrangements and help you to get settled down again. Have you any people living to whom you can definitely go?"

"That I can't say, sir. You see, I've been here a tidy long while. And most likely all the people I used to know have died. Perhaps even Fred Smith has died too. A tidy long while I've been here. There's been a war finished and done with since I've been here. And you see that little flag-pole against my bit of window? Well, I always thought that was a flag-pole from the day it first went up, a fine month back. But that isn't a flag-pole. It's a wireless. So Southampton Jack tells me. I'll have to step very quiet till I pick up that lot of ropes outside again."

"Yes, quite. H'm! A great pity you haven't somewhere definite to go—something definite to do. Perhaps I may be able to exert—"

"Oh, I've got something definite to do all right, sir."

"Oh, you have. Oh, well, of course, that's splendid. Regular employment, is it?"

"Pretty regular, maybe. I want to take the mike out of that cocksure crowd in the court. Because, you see, sir, I never killed Fred Smith."

The chaplain, who had heard that curious uncomplaining fact reiterated with such steady persistence that he had almost come to believe it himself, made a mental note that Thomas Masterick was a case which would have to be watched pretty closely when he got clear of the prison.

But he needn't have worried. The authorities admitted two months later that their suspicions about Masterick were groundless. And they called off the System. He had hoarded no dark animosity against those connected with his trial—except, of course, for the fact that Thomas Masterick did not kill Fred Smith, was perfectly honest and fair. In fact, he made what they called "quite a good recovery." He picked into the old ruts with deliberate, if painful, endeavour. He got a job down about the docks and set about his task of climbing back into civilization again with calm stolidity. In his case they did not fear for the recidivist.

And yet, a month after that they freely admitted that it would have been far better for them and for the country and sanity of all the legal world if Thomas Masterick had gone straight out; bought a gun and kicked up ten different bells according to his own half-burned-out lights. For the problem that Thomas Masterick brought with him was calculated to liberate when the time was ripe the law-officers of the Crown to their finger-tips. He left it flat and ringing. "He sent every legal mind in the country, practically scamping through old and ancient tomes for light and guidance. But there was no light and guidance. Thomas Masterick had stored them away and completely, ludicrously, and horribly."

For, three months after his release from prison and quite by accident, he met the long, lanky devil in the black gown—Counsel for the Crown—was also wearing a Knight's badge and a K.C. Thomas Masterick was not to know that. Not that he would have mattered to that numb, pulseless squel, even if he had known it.

It was by the "Griffin," where Fleet-street melts into the Strand, and he walked up to him, and he said: "Hey, mister—you know all that lot of stuff you said about me?"

The K.C. looked down at him, slowly and paused for a moment. "No," he said evenly. "I don't think I do."

"Yes, you remember—that lot of stuff you said about me in the court. To the judge."

The K.C.'s eyes contracted ever so slightly. Somewhere, right away in the back blocks of memory there came a tiny, fleeting picture—a glimpse.

"Oh, yes—I believe I do," he said. "Let me see, now—er—wasn't it—er—"

"Yes, mister; that's what it was. And it was all wrong. All the whole lot of it. I said so at the time, didn't I? And I'm saying so again. I never killed Fred Smith. Not in spite of all what you said. Honest I didn't. And one of these days I'll prove it to you. I'll give you the surprise of your life. And the surprise of everybody else's life who was in that court."

The K.C. drew in a long breath, slowly. "Ye gods!" he breathed, almost too low to be heard. "So you—you have only just come out, have you?"

"Yes, mister. A couple of months ago."

"Are you working? I mean, have you got anything to do?"

"Yes, mister. Got a regular job. Wapping to Covent Garden. I'm often along here."

"That's a good man." The K.C. slipped a fiver into his hand. "Get yourself a nice new 'Sunday suit,' he said, with a pat on his shoulder.

"Thank you very much, mister." Thomas Masterick pocketed the fiver and hung around. After a moment he said:

"Could you—would you give me a word of advice, too, sir?"

"Certainly, certainly. What's the trouble?"

"Well, supposing I ever found that Fred Smith you said I killed. See, just supposing. How would I have to go about it?"

The K.C. whistled under his breath. "Well!" he said, "that would be a poser. Perhaps the best thing you could do would be to come along and see me—here in my chambers. Any of the bobbies here will show you—just here in the Inner Temple."

"Because down in my lodging-house there's a White Star man says he's seen Fred Smith—that's since you said I killed him. It was in Frisco, he said, and Fred was running grain in the hog-backs. Got tired 'o' sail, he did."

"Well, look here, old-man, if ever you do manage to get hold of him, you come along and see me. I'll do all I can to help you."

"I wouldn't half be able to take the mike out of that cocky lot of devils, wouldn't I?"

"You would what?"

"Prove 'em a lot of unholy liars." "You certainly would."

"Not 'arf, I wouldn't," said Thomas Masterick tonelessly. "I'd do more than that, too!"

The K.C. nodded genially and went off with a little ploy and a lot of amusement in his heart. He was a good soul in his way, was the K.C., but the acid of the Law ran tart in his veins. His perceptions were too subversive to the dictates of logic.

But it happened that he heard from Thomas Masterick again. On a most propitious day, too. The K.C. was launching a few legal friends in his chambers. There were three other K.C.s, a former Chancellor, and two Judges of the High Court, among them.

The K.C.'s secretary entered and slipped behind his chair. "There's a very persistent fellow outside, sir—a man who calls himself Thomas Masterick. He says you wouldn't turn him away for anything. That he's very important, sir. And that he's got Fred Smith with him!"

"Good God!" said the K.C., swinging round. "Here? He's got Smith here?"

but the Home Sec. commuted. That, farther into the room. "I've had a too, was obvious. He—"
Rumbold nodded, and the others all pronounced. "And when I did and he wouldn't come along—I told him about you, mister. I ain't got much to say—I'm afraid I've got a daisy coming out of that. What comes in a few words he outlined the details of the case to them and the way I look at it is this: 'You were a cocksure crowd of devils in that court, weren't you? I wouldn't listen to reason no way. I told you a hundred times. I never killed Fred Smith, but you wouldn't take it. You was that damn cocksure about it. You laughed me for a blarney. You said during that trial there, 'And I ain't done it. But I've done the blarney for a blarney.'"
"And now," he suddenly pulled out through the heart, where he stood a gun and shot Fred Smith clean now. Fred done the murder for which I've always been punished."

"I don't want any help," said Masterick slyly. He dragged Smith are you going to do about it?"

WASHINGTON NOW LESS RADICAL.

Urgent Necessity For New Capital.

NEW FINANCING OPERATIONS

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL.

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received April 21, 8.20 a.m.)

New York, To-day.

The gradual trend of official circles in Washington toward the modification of certain radical phases in "New Deal" is viewed in banking circles, this week, as an hopeful augury of the early resumption of new financing operations.

The necessity for new capital is daily growing more urgent, and a modification of the Securities Act, bankers aver, would result in numerous issues of new securities on the market, which is now in excellent shape to receive them.—United Press, per S.C. Gold Bar Co.

RUNSWICK TRAGEDY RECALLED

London, To-day.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales yesterday distributed medals to lifeboatmen, for outstanding exhibitions of courage and endurance in rescue work. The recipients of the gold medal, which is the Victoria Cross of the service, included the widow of Coxswain Robert Patton of the Runswick lifeboat, in Yorkshire.

Coxswain Patton died from injuries received during a violent storm while rescuing a crippled sailor who was unable to escape with the rest of the crew from the sinking steamer, "Dispenser," to whose deck rail he was clinging.

The lifeboat was swept against the "Dispenser," badly crushing Coxswain Patton, but he supported the cripple until their rescue was effected, when he collapsed.

The Runswick lifeboat been renamed the Robert Patton.—British Wireless Service.

London, To-day.

The eminent scientist, Sir Alfred Ewing, at the South Kensington Science Museum to-day, opened a new refrigeration exhibition promoted through the collaboration of the British Association of Refrigeration, the National Physical Laboratory and the Low Temperature Research Station at Cambridge.

In view of the dependence of Britain on imported foodstuffs, particularly on fruit, beef and mutton, special interest centres in the model ship exhibited. It displays how different classes of perishables are carried, and how their quality is preserved.—British Wireless Service.

The Senate Banking Committee, by a vote of 11 to 8, yesterday voted to favourably report the Fletcher-Rayburn Stock Exchange Regulation Bill.

Always have GARDAN in the house!

In the tropics pain and illness are particularly liable to appear suddenly. In headache, toothache, neuralgia, rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, muscular pains, and above all in fever and its accompanying symptoms, GARDAN is of definite value.

When you are out of sorts remember:

GARDAN
prevents and stops pain
